

IMTA ALUM RACHEL BOSTON IN I HATE KIDS

IMTA Press Release
January 17, 2019

I Hate Kids is in limited release and VOD January 18

I Hate Kids follows Nick Pearson, a former lothario and author of the title best-selling memoir, who has everything he wants. He's about to marry the woman of his dreams, Sydney Bartlett, who shares his disinterest in becoming a parent. But just days before their wedding, he's shocked to find out that he has the one thing he never wanted: a child.

Nick's happy, child-free existence is put in jeopardy when awkward 13-year-old Mason interrupts the engaged couple's rehearsal dinner, and claims to be the groom-to-be's son. With the aid of flamboyant radio show psychic The Amazing Fabular, who claims he helped Mason find his father after having a vision about them, the three strangers embark on a wild road trip to find out which of a dozen eccentric women from Nick's past could possibly be Mason's mother.

IMTA alum Rachel Boston stars as Sydney, opposite Tom Everett Scott as Nick, with Julian Feder as Nick's son, Mason, and Tituss Burgess as The Amazing Fabular.

Boston was most recently seen in the Lifetime holiday movie A Christmas in Tennessee. In the family comedy, she played a baker trying to unite the people of her small mountain town to stop a development that would destroy their way of life. Caroline Rhea, Kate Moyer, Patricia Richardson and Andrew W. Walker also starred. Boston has appeared in numerous Hallmark movies which re-air during the Christmas holiday season, including Christmas in Angel Falls, A Rose for Christmas and Ice Sculpture Christmas.

Boston starred for two seasons in Lifetime's "Witches of Eastwick" alongside Julia Ormand, Mädchen Amick and Jenna Dewan. In November, Boston guest-starred as a terminal ovarian cancer patient in the "Hubert" episode of the NBS hit, "The Good Doctor."